UNDER ARREST FOR MURDER

Blossburg Man Confesses to Killing Fred Lewis of Elmira

The murder mystery that has engaged the attention of Elmira authorities for the past six weeks was cleared up last Wednesday night when Raymond VanNess, 19 years old, of Blossburg, was placed under arrest charged with killing Fred H. Lewis, of Elmira, on the night of September 15, on Railroad avenue in that city.

The circumstances surrounding the killing of young Lewis and the subsequent events which led the officials far afield, were unusually baffling and seemingly affording no clue to the identity of the murderer nor the motive for the crime. Our readers will recall that the murdered man's brother was held for some time as a material witness, though he appeared unable to throw much light on the affair and it was the belief of the authorities at the time that the young man was withholding important information which might lead to a solution of the mystery. Subsequent events, however, indicate that the brother had told a detailed story of the affair correctly and to the best of his ability.

The Elmira police have worked unceasingly on the case and finally, after six weeks of determined effort, the trail led them in the direction of young VanNess. As a result of their investigations Elmira officers came to Blossburg on the night of September 22 for the purpose of placing Van Ness under arrest, but the latter was, in some manner appraised of their coming and eluded them.

Last Wednesday night, learning that VanNess had returned to Blossburg, the Elmira officers, accompanied by District Attorney Charles M. Elliott, Sheriff E. G. Kelts and Deputy Sheriff Jenkins, made another trip to Blossburg and succeeded in apprehending the fugitive.

VanNess was brought to Wellsboro and, before being lodged in jail, confessed his crime and related the circumstances which led up to it. His confession was readily given and came without the infliction of any "third degree" methods on the part of the authorities.

VanNess who is a fine looking youth of 19, told the officers that previous to the murder he had been employed on the State road near Gillett, Pennsylvania, and on the evening of September 15 went to Elmira where, after visiting several of the Railroad avenue saloons, he became engaged in a crap game with two young men who were strangers to him.

The game, which was in progress on Magee street, in the rear of Railroad avenue, resulted in a loss of $50 to the young Blossburg man. Determined to retrieve his losses, VanNess says, he picked up an iron bar from a trash pile near by and followed two men up Railroad avenue supposing them to be the men who had taken his money. After traversing several streets the young man finally overtook the two he was following and struck one of them on the head with the iron bar, felling him to the pavement. The victims' companion, for some unaccountable reason, instead of attacking the murderer, fled, and it was only when VanNess was going through the pockets of his victim that he realized he had made a mistake and that the man he had laid low with his murderous implement was an entire stranger to him and not the person who had taken his money in the crap game so recently concluded.

The day following the murder young VanNess returned to Blossburg where he remained with his parents until the night of September 22, when he eluded the officers as above stated, and has since traveled about the country hounded by the fear and remorse which eventually led him to come back to Blossburg where he was arrested last Wednesday night.

Inasmuch as he has confessed his guilt it is likely that no time will be lost in bringing the unfortunate young man before the bar of justice to answer the terrible charge standing against him.

VanNess comes from a highly respected family of Blossburg and his father and mother are crushed at the misfortune that has overtaken their only son. The boy has never before been in trouble and hasborne a good reputation in the community. The deplorable situation in which he now finds himself is the result of his weakness in yielding to the lure of Railroad avenue and Elmira places and in the time that has elapsed since he committed the act which will place him on trial charged with taking a human life, he has been, we have no doubt, a period of terrible nightmare that will always hang over him. His sorrow of regret is overwhelming, but he must realize the enormity of the offense to which he has confessed and appropriately pay the penalty of his crime.

SWAN-SCHEERER.

Popular Wellsboro Couple United in Marriage Tuesday Evening.

At eight o'clock on Tuesday evening, at the home of the bride's mother on Charleston street, occurred the marriage of Miss Helen P. Swan, daughter of Mrs. Flora Swan, to Mr. Frederick Scheerer, the Rev. O. G. Cocks performing the ceremony in the presence of a few relatives of the contracting parties.

The house was prettily decorated with autumnal colorings, the general scheme of gold and white being carried out most artistically. At the wedding dinner which followed the ceremony the table decorations were equally harmonious and blended pleasingly with a beautiful dinner set of hand painted china in gold and white, a gift from the bride's mother.

Mrs. Scheerer was most becomingly gowned in blue satin crepe and wore about her neck a handsome string of gold beads that had graced the person of her great-great grandmother on the latter's wedding day. Little Shirley Shattuck, of Cleveland, Ohio, four-year-old cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

The happy couple left yesterday morning for a two weeks trip to southern points, following which they will be at home to their friends at the Swan residence on Charleston street.

Mrs. Scheerer is a young woman of more than ordinary ability and exceedingly popular with a large circle of friends and acquaintances. She is a graduate of Wellsboro High School and Elmira College and has always made use of her talents in a practical way. She is the Wellsboro correspondent of the Williamsport Grit. Mr. Scheerer, while he has been a resident of Wellsboro but a comparatively short time has made a great many friends here.

The Gazette extends to the newlyweds best wishes for a long, happy and prosperous wedded life.

Death of Sara E. King.

Miss Sara E. King, aged 43 years, died at her home on Grant street last Wednesday evening following an illness of several months duration.

The deceased, who was an artist of unusual ability, had been, for the past five years, located in Waterbury, Conn., where she occupied a position of prominence in artists' circles and had executed many works of art that won for her well deserved recognition. About six months ago she suffered a nervous breakdown and was brought to her home in this borough where every thing that medical science could do supplemented by loving ministration, was invoked in her behalf. She grew steadily weaker, however, until she passed away as above stated.

Miss King is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Arthur W. Spencer, of California, and Misses Jennie and Lottie King, of this borough.

The funeral was held last Saturday afternoon at four o'clock from St. Paul's Episcopal church, Rev. George R. VanWaters officiating; interment in Wellsboro cemetery.

An Appeal for Fair Play.

It is the intention of the law that the minority party be represented on the Board of County Commissioners. As the minority member of the present Board I have served one term and have asked to be returned. In this I have simply followed the rule that no man can do his best during his first term because the laws governing the office are so many and the work is so varied that it is only through experience that one can become efficient.

Unlike some persons, I do not claim to have made no mistakes; but I do claim that my word is good and that I have conscientiously worked in the county's interest. I am proud of the work done during the past three and a half years and ask you to compare the condition of our bridges and that of the County Home with the conditions of four years ago.

I have indulged in no electioneering, but have tried to conduct a clean campaign, and if returned shall endeavor to represent no particular locality but to give you all a square deal.

HARRY C. MOORE.

Well Deserved Praise.

The Board of Directors of the Wellsboro Nursing Association takes pleasure in spreading upon the minutes of the association and in presenting to Miss Ruth C. Jones upon her voluntary relinquishment of her duties as its Community Nurse, a hearty and unsolicited commendation of her faithful services.

During the two years of her service she has so faithfully commended herself to our own confidence and that of the community, personally and in the matter of her efficiency in ministry to the sick in nursing visits and in her health service in the High School and the Grades. In this last work of her physical examination of the students has both been a ministry to them personally, and a protection of the community against infection from which we have been especially free. We much regret our loss and wish her the best of success in her new fields of service.

Respectfully yours, The Wellsboro Nursing Association, Fred W. Sisson, President; W. E. Cockburn, Secretary.

OFFICER IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

District Attorney Elliott Sustains Bruises When Thrown From Car.

District Attorney Charles M. Elliott sustained severe bruises and lacerations in an automobile crash near Covington last Wednesday night when he, in company with Elmira officers, was returning to Wellsboro with Raymond VanNess, of Blossburg, who later confessed to the murder of Fred H. Lewis, of Elmira, for whose murderer the New York State authorities have been searching for the past six weeks.

The party of officers with VanNess in charge were traveling toward Wellsboro and had reached a point on the State road a short distance from Covington when the enclosed car in which Mr. Elliott was riding with District Attorney Herendeen, of Elmira, was crashed into by a car driven by Jesse Coons, of Covington, the terrific impact overturning the officers' car and throwing them into the road. Mr. Elliott was the only member of the party who was injured and, while he was considerably bruised, his injuries were not of a serious nature.

Mr. Coons, after some disturbance, was taken into custody and the party proceeded to Covington where he was arraigned on a charge of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated. Justice of the Peace Avery held the man to bail in the sum of $1,000 and he was brought on and lodged in jail.

It was a narrow escape from serious injury for all the occupants of the car and Mr. Coons, if he is guilty will undoubtedly have sufficient leisure time on his hands to ponder long and well on his mistake. It is bad enough to run down an ordinary citizen, but when a man attempts to buck off the road two cars loaded with police officials he certainly is getting in wrong.

DEATH OF S. O. PUTNAM

Ex-County Commissioner Passed Away Last Sunday Morning

Samuel O. Putnam, aged 68 years, ex-County Commissioner, died very suddenly at his home in Covington last Sunday morning at eight o'clock, as a result of an acute heart attack. Though he had not been in the best of health for some months past, he was not considered dangerously ill and his sudden passing came as a distinct shock to his thousands of friends whose heartfelt sympathy is now extended to his bereaved family.

Mr. Putnam was born in Covington February 19, 1855, a son of Thomas and Elvina Connolly Putnam. His early years were spent on his father's farm and, when he had reached young manhood he went west, where for several years he herded cattle on a large ranch. Returning to the town of his birth he went into the hotel business, conducting successfully the "Mansion House," which still stands on the Covington "four corners."

Mr. Putnam was elecetd to the Board of County Commissioners in November 1902 and assumed his position the following January. He served out his term and was re-elected in 1906. In 1912 he was appointed to a vacancy on the board, served out the unexpired term and, in 1915, was elected to a full term of four years.

THE LATE SAMUEL O. PUTNAM

"Sam" was peculiarly fitted to discharge the duties pertaining to the office of County Commissioner. He brought to it a keen perception of successful business methods, a steadfastness of purpose, faithful to his convictions and a determination to stand by them that enabled him to discharge his duties conscientiously and without fear or favor. The same sound business principles which governed him in his private enterprises were extended to public affairs and by this means he was able to save thousands of dollars to the taxpayers of Tioga County. With it all he was broad minded and always fair. Once convinced of the righteousness of a cause, "Sam" was for it good and strong and was just as ready to endorse the payment of a just County obligation as he was to discountenance a false one.

Sam Putnam's record in the County Commissioners' office of Tioga County is indeed an enviable one—one that will stand for years to come as a fit memorial to his business acumen, his strict integrity and painstaking labor.

As a friend and neighbor he was kind, generous and ever ready to lend a helping hand. Only a few months ago he opened to the public the beautiful park that bears his name, on the State road near Covington, wherein everyone is welcome. Tourists from all parts of the United States accepted his hospitality during the summer just passed.

From 1902 until 1919 the deceased was a resident of Wellsboro, returning to Covington in the latter year and settling down on his beautiful farm in that village, where he has since resided.

Besides his widow, Mr. Putnam is survived by one sister, Mrs. Helena Whittaker, of Covington. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at two o'clock from the late home of the deceased, Rev. N. Johnstone, of Trusses, officiating; interment in Covington cemetery.

HUNTING SEASON OPEN.

Reports Indicate Plenty of Both Large and Small Game.

The season for small game hunting in Pennsylvania opens to-day and hunters should find plenty of sport, according to Seth E. Gordon, Secretary of the State Game Commission.

The drought, which was harmful to many crops, was beneficial to most species of game, especially rabbits and the various game birds, as wet weather during the breeding season frequently is injurious to the young.

Reports indicate there are plenty of rabbits and squirrels. Secretary Gordon says the later squirrel hunting season now in effect will afford the squirrels better protcetion. With the leaves fairly well off of the trees the squirrels will have a better chance to sight the hunters.

Reports from wardens indicate plenty of small game. The reports on bear, deer and elk are also good. This will be the first open season for elk since Pennsylvania adopted her conservation policy.

The season runs to November 30 on wild turkeys, pheasants, quail and squirrels. The rabbit season runs fifteen days longer, as does also the bear season, though each hunter may take but one in the season.

The deer and elk season does not begin until December 1 and closes December 15. One male deer with two or more points to one antler is allowed to each individual hunter a season, and six to one camp or body of men. Bull elk with four or more points to an antler are limited to one a season, and one to one camp or body of men. Elk may be shot by still hunting only, and no part of the carcass can be shipped from the State.

Local hunters are already preparing camps and paraphernalia in anticipation of the big game season.

CLOSING DAYS OF INSTITUTE

Resume of Proceedings Beginning With Last Wednesday Morning

Our report of the institute proceedings closed last week with the address of Dr. Matheny on "Equipment and Nature Study," delivered on Wednesday morning. Dr. Matheny was followed by Robert C. Shaw, of the Department of Public Instruction, who spoke on "Teaching That Sticks," with especial attention to that all important branch of our public school curriculum—spelling.

One of the first essentials in the teaching of spelling is a proper choice or selection of words to suit the various grades of the school. Most textbooks contain too many words and we necessarily fail to teach thoroughly the particular words that children will need to spell in life. Our most complete dictionaries contain about one-half million words, yet we find that the average individual uses in writing not more than four to five thousand words. This being true, it is necessary that the teaching be confined to the words included in this number.

Teachers must realize that every individual has four vocabularies as follows: (1) a reading vocabulary, (2) a hearing vocabulary; (3) a speaking vocabulary; (4) a writing vocabulary. This does not mean that there are four distinct groups of different words. Some words, of course, fall in all of these groups. The largest group is the reading vocabulary; second, the hearing vocabulary; third, the speaking vocabulary; fourth, the smallest group of all and the one where children must have a knowledge of spelling, the writing vocabulary. This list probably would not contain more than twenty-five or thirty per cent of the first, or reading vocabulary.

It is the business of the teacher to select the words from the assigned lesson with which any pupil may have difficulty, and call the attention of the class not only to the word, but to that part of the word likely to be misspelled.

If the word should be composed entirely of syllables not spelled phonetically, write the entire word so strikingly that the mental picture will be clear. For example, the word Chautauqua. A word of this kind should be written upon the board in large letters, preferably in colored chalk. It is sometimes well to write a word several places upon the board.

Always after such a presentation, test the pupils with words out of sight until the mental picture is perfected or until the words are spelled.

WEDNESDAY MORNING

Sectional Meeting—Grade and Rural Section at Auditorium.

Mrs. Fetteroff discussed drawing with the teachers of the rural and grade section at the Auditorium emphasizing object drawing which begins with 4th grade pupils usually. Her methods were highly interesting and are most certain to hold the interest of the children as their sense of accurate measurement and detail are sharpened almost unconsciously as they proceed with the fascinating lesson. They should choose the objects for models themselves.

She presented many pleasing designs in her complete equipment of scrap books.

Sectional Meeting at High School.

At the high school Dr. Belknap, of the Mansfield Normal spoke on "The Conquest of the Mother Tongue." This should be the aim of teachers everywhere. The complete mastery of the mother tongue requires a life time but those who have in charge the instruction of the children should see that they can write legibly and should be acquainted with sufficient number of words to read intelligently a newspaper or magazine; they should be able to write a letter well constructed, punctuated and paragraphed and with some force of expression. Inability to write a good letter has been the cause of the failure of many young people in seeking positions or promotions.

How shall we give this most desirable training? We must vary our methods to suit the requirements of each particular class.

Outside reading [illegible] a requisite [illegible] a [illegible] and important factor [illegible] the [illegible] a mastery of our language. One is well [illegible] knows the fundamental structure of our language. The mastery of English being an art, however, it must be acquired by practice and drill and too much attention must not be paid to the formal rules of grammar. The written composition is one of best aids in a knowledge of how to use the English language. In assignment of topics for written compositions care should be exercised in securing a variety of subjects which not only make the work easier to correct and draw away with the pupil's working together, but also encourage independent thinking. Select topics on which they can write intelligently without too much reading thus avoiding a probable generalization of the words of the author. In this work care should be exercised to avoid an overstimulation of the ambition of the pupils.

The matter of enthusiasm in composition work is important. There

CHURNING UP BUSINESS

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"I DON'T believe you like the churn business very well, Tommy," speculated Helen Rand, as a powdered-looking superintendent went back into the factory with a small sheaf of orders.

"It's rotten," Tommy gloomily confided.

"How did you come to select churns?" wondered Mrs. Rushmore, replacing her subscription list in her handbag, but opening it again to see if Tommy's name was dry.

"I didn't," confessed Tommy with a half-vexed smile; "they selected me. The Johnson Churn company is the oldest factory of its kind in the country, and I didn't want to see a nice old business like that go under. They needed a combination of new capital and new blood, and I had it; and so there you are."

"Then why don't you like it?" puzzled Helen, her particularly effective eyes resting on him for a moment with frank approval.

"I don't seem to have the right kind of new blood," he worried. "My money kept the concern from bankruptcy, but nobody seems to care for the suggestions I make."

"It'll be all right, Tommy; you're lucky," laughed Helen as she rose to go.

The door opened, and there came in, from the factory yard, a tall and exceptionally fine-looking stranger who was dressed with extreme nicety. He bowed in the general direction of Tommy, but his glance, in sweeping from Mrs. Rushmore to Helen, caught, for a fleeting second, the eyes of the latter.

"We'll see you tomorrow night, Tommy," remarked Mrs. Rushmore; and Helen, as she went out at the door, waved Tommy a gay adieu.

"Mr. Spencer?" inquired the stranger.

"Correct," admitted Tommy, with a parting nod to the ladies through the crack of the closing door, and he examined the neatly engraved calling card. "What can I do for you, Mr. Ames?"

"I'd like permission to inspect your factory," requested Ames, with a smile of friendliness.

"I don't see any objection to that," granted Tommy, responding to the smile. He felt an instant liking for the man. "I'm afraid you won't see much, however."

"That's what I hope," returned the stranger.

Tommy looked at him wonderingly.

"That's a queer statement," he observed.

"It merely needs explanation," answered Ames, pleasantly. "I'm looking for a business opportunity."

"Come right in, the water's fine," invited Tommy with a grin. "That's what I was looking for; but I found it."

"So I understand," smiled Ames. "I came into town last night, and have been making inquiries all morning [illegible] local enterprises."

"How did you happen to pick out the Johnson Churn company?"

"Your pay roll. At one time this concern employed 800 workmen. Today it employs scarcely more than 200. If I can discover the reason for that, it might be of benefit to both of us."

"I think I'll go through the shop with you," suddenly decided Tommy, and led the way into the factory.

CHAPTER II.

The shop was apparently busy. The shafting of the long, low room was turning at a good speed, and in two squat rows was heavy looking machinery, about half of which, however, was idle.

"Where's that lumber going?" asked Ames.

"To the grooving machinery in the next room," replied Tommy.

"I see; what's that chap doing in this upper corner?"

"Smoothing the tubs. It's an interesting process."

Tommy led the way over to the corner. A man surrounded by high piles of the white oak churn bodies was clamping them, by turns, in a clumsy lathe, and scraping them, both inside and out, first with steel shaving tools and then with sandpaper. Ames watched him interestedly for a few moments, and walked away. An elevator came down piled with staves. A boy unloaded them and carried them [illegible] which stood near [illegible]. Another boy came down [illegible] box [illegible]

"Where's that stuff going?" Ames wanted to know. He stopped the boy and reached his hand in the box.

"To the [illegible]," Tommy told him.

Ames fished around in the shavings. He brought out a strip of oak two feet long, two inches thick, three inches wide at the butt and an inch wide at the point. He found three others just like it.

"You need a lot of these pieces in the fire, I suppose," he surmised.

"Stacks and stacks of them," worried Tommy. "It's the best oak we can buy, and it seems a criminal waste; but it's apparently unavoidable. They're trimmed from the edges of the staves, and the lumber can't be cut [illegible] economically, because we [illegible] the grain running straight."

"True enough," admitted Ames, "but something should be made of those pieces."

"I suggested [illegible]," and Tommy wrinkled his brow. "The superintendent and the manager [illegible] at the [illegible]. They claim we'd [illegible] our [illegible] in making a market for another [illegible]. They've run this plant for [illegible] and years, and they know all about it. I don't."

"They were in financial difficulties when they got you, weren't they?"

"Yes, but there was a time when they made a good profit. They've been cramped for capital here lately."

"Why?" asked Ames.

"I don't know," mused Tommy. "The big cramp came right after they enlarged the plant. I guess they overplayed themselves; then they ran into heavy competition."

"I understand it now," nodded Ames. "They did all their big manufacturing in this room. When they enlarged the plant they didn't rearrange the machinery."

As they turned away, the superintendent, a wrinkled-faced old man, with a white mustache, came up to them and Tommy introduced him.

"Mr. Ames is studying our methods of production," Tommy explained.

"Are you familiar with the churn business?" inquired the superintendent, with ill-concealed resentment.

"I never saw a churn factory before," confessed Ames with a laugh.

"Oh," said the superintendent with a snort of amusement.

When Tommy and Ames returned from their inspection of the plant they found the superintendent in the office with the manager, a large, red-faced man, who was addicted to shirt sleeves and who chewed cigars. The superintendent was leaning on the corner of the manager's desk and both turned with displeasure as Tommy came in. The superintendent nodded and returned to the factory. Tommy introduced his caller, and explained his present mission in life.

"Yes," acknowledged the manager, giving Ames a thorough sizing up. "Brinley has just been telling me that you were giving Tommy some expert advice. What do you think of our plant, Mr. Ames?"

"Frankly, it's pretty bad," he began. "You should shut down your shop for about a month and rearrange all your effective machinery."

The manager leaned back in his chair and looked at Ames through heavy-lidded eyes.

"Do you like the color of the new rug Tommy put down?" he insolently inquired.

Ames rose.

"I came here to talk business," he stated.

"Who invited you?"

"I did," unexpectedly declared Tommy. "There's something wrong with this factory, Lasset, and I'm going to find out why the Reverse Gear people can undersell us."

"Mr. Ames is as ignorant of a churn factory as you are," retorted Lasset. "You look after the finances, Tommy, and we'll tend to the factory."

Tommy studied the manager unsmilingly.

"I've made an unfortunate impression on you, Lasset," he presently observed. "You think I'm a saphead, because you got my money into this concern; but I want you to always remember that I came along with the money [illegible] I'm going to see that I get my money's worth. Come on, Ames, we'll take a spin. I want you to talk to me."

CHAPTER III.

Tommy found Brinley out in the shop giving specific orders to the foreman of the stave department about the handling of his material.

"It's awkward to do it," the foreman was protesting when Tommy came up.

"It saves two handlings," Brinley insisted. "You take them now from here into the other building, finish and shape the ends, bring them back to have the edges grooved, and take them over to the other building again for assembling. By grooving the edges before you take them out of here we'll save two handlings."

"That's what I've always said," declared the foreman.

"You do as I tell you," ordered Brinley, and a very much disgruntled foreman walked away to injure the perfect workmanship in which he had taken so much pride.

"You're putting into effect one of Mr. Ames' suggestions," charged Tommy.

"It's something I've had in mind a long time," denied the superintendent.

"Then why didn't you do it?" Tommy immediately wanted to know.

"Mr. Spencer, I am supposed to answer leading questions like that to only one man in this concern," he [illegible]. "I can't work for two bosses."

[illegible]

"Some day [illegible] for any," prophesied Tommy.

He returned to the office full of anger.

"Lasset, I found Brinley putting into execution one of Mr. Ames' suggestions, only doing it clumsily," he observed.

"Suppose he is?" growled Lasset.

"I think it proves Ames' point," persisted Tommy.

"We don't need another ornamental man," remarked Lasset.

Tommy kept his temper pretty well, considering.

"We need a new manager," he declared. "You represented to me that if you were unhampered by [illegible] you could put us on a dividend-paying basis."

"The price of lumber['s] gone [illegible] since you came into the business," [illegible] informed [illegible].

"Not enough to account for [illegible] monthly [illegible]," argued Tommy, "and [illegible] enough to make the Reverse Gear company agree with [illegible]. Our methods of production [illegible] out of date."

[illegible]

admitted Lasset. "I went after him this morning. I think we'll rearrange some of our machinery."

Tommy, who was a hearty young man, with no kinks on his shoulders, slammed a capable fist on his desk.

"By jinks, that does settle it," he swore. "If you'll go that far in stealing Ames' thunder, you prove to me that he was right in everything he wanted to do; and I'm going to have him out here."

"Are you aware that you don't own this factory?" demanded Lasset icily. "I hold more stock than you do. I control the situation, and I'm going to run this plant without interference. Who is this Ames, anyway? Where does he come from?"

"Blessed if I know," replied Tommy. "I never thought to ask him."

Lasset laughed.

"Exactly," he accused. "That shows how thoroughly impractical you are. Ames is probably a grafter. Has he any money?"

"He isn't hunting work," insisted Tommy. "He says he fairly aches to put this plant on its feet. It interests him. He'll come in here, remodel our factory and output, install our side lines, and inaugurate new selling methods, and he'll take one-third of the increase of profits for his share. Of course, we'll have to advance him money enough to live on."

"Now, we're coming at it!" triumphed Lasset. "How much does he want?"

Tommy colored slightly. "Five hundred dollars a month," he stated.

Lasset threw himself back in his chair to roar, then he jumped up and went out into the shop, and Tommy heard him laughing with Brinley. Tommy telephoned Ames. "It's no use, old man," he regretted. "I can't make them see it."

"You see it, don't you?" inquired Ames.

"I see it so hard it hurts my eyes," emphatically announced Tommy.

"Then sell me a share of stock," suggested Ames. "As a stockholder he can't keep me out of the factory, and he can't keep me out of the stockholders' meeting the first of the month. Find out how the stock is divided."

"I can tell you right now," returned Tommy. "I looked it up this morning. I own 40 per cent of the stock, Lasset owns 45, outside stockholders, who haven't attended a meeting for years, own 5 per cent, and the other 10 per cent is owned by the workmen."

"Then there's an easy solution," advised Ames in a relieved voice. "You'd best buy a little more stock, and win over as many of the workmen as possible to vote with you. At the next stockholders' meeting you can throw Lasset out, if need be. If you want to save a dollar of your investment, you must obtain private control."

"By jinks, I'll do it!" he decided. "Ames, suppose you come out and help me talk to the men?"

"All right," laughed Ames. "By the way, Tommy, can you lend me $500?"

For a moment Tommy hesitated. The sheer "nerve" of the thing took his breath. Just then Lasset came into the office.

"Certainly, old man," gulped Tommy. "I'll see you this noon."

He hung up and turned to Lasset.

"I'd like to draw five hundred dollars," he said, and grinned.

CHAPTER IV.

Tommy met Ames at noon and handed him the five hundred dollars he had promised.

"Thanks," said Ames, and stuffed the money nonchalantly in his pocket. "Have you time for lunch?"

"I'm going to take it," laughed Tommy. "I'd like to have you come over to the Commercial club with me."

"With pleasure," accepted Ames, and Tommy, with a trace of pride in the distinguished appearance of his guest, walked into the well appointed business club which he had so recently joined.

He introduced Ames to three or four of the members, and they strolled through the billiard parlor on their way to the dining room.

"Hello, John Ames!" greeted Dick Templeton, walking up to the visitor and shaking hands cordially.

"You've deprived me of a pleasure," [illegible] complained Tommy. "I [illegible] had hoped to [illegible]"

"Couldn't think of it," [illegible] declined Dick. "I was a guest of [illegible] Ames at the Ivy club in New York."

"Going to be in town tonight, Ames?" asked Templeton.

"I hope to remain some little time," replied Ames with a quiet smile at Tommy.

"Fine business!" exclaimed Dick. "Tommy, we must take him out to Mrs. Rushmore's little informal dance, and give the girls a treat."

CHAPTER V.

Within ten minutes after John Ames landed at Mrs. Rushmore's that night, the entire feminine contingent of the most exclusive set in town realized that this would be a lively social season. All the matrons with [illegible] daughters threw out [illegible] tentacles in every direction, [illegible] anxious to obtain informa[illegible]

He danced first with Helen Rand, and that lively young lady sparkled and snapped and glowed under the consciousness that the eyes of every girl on the floor was unceasingly upon them. Tommy Spencer danced with that fluffy little Rostand girl, and surprised Helen by flirting outrageously. Helen flashed at him a glance of amusement as she passed him in the waltz, but Tommy seemed even more amused than she.

"You waltz like a sunbeam!" observed John Ames, as he guided Helen deftly out of the pocket made by clumsy Al Blair. His voice was deep and musical, and full of vibration.

Helen favored him with her most bell-like laugh, and turned her wonderfully effective big eyes up to his for a fleeting second.

"I have a badly arranged card," he told her. "It only carries one dance with you."

"I'll give you the first extra," she immediately offered.

"Just one extra won't do," he urged her. "I must have more than that." He glanced down at her, his big black eyes aglow with eagerness. Yes, she looked pleased.

Tommy Kept His Temper Pretty Well, Considering. "We Need a New Manager," He Declared.

Tommy scowled for an instant as they whirled by him, and then he turned to that fluffy little Rostand girl with determined ardor.

"You want too much," Helen chided Ames.

"I take pride in my selfishness," he assured her.

* * * * * * *

Ames visited the factory as Tommy's guest. He inspected each machine, in turn, and he watched the operations of each workman with interest. He paused at a lathe and began to take off his gloves.

"That's a bad bevel you have on your gouge," he told the workman. "It's too blunt, and to get a proper slice with it you must hold it too nearly at right angles. One of these days you'll strike a particularly tough knot, and you'll get that handle on your chin."

The workman grinned sheepishly.

"Let me try it a minute," suggested Ames, and took the tool from him.

"You could work faster and with less expenditure of energy if your tools were in proper condition," he commented.

"He knows his business," admitted the leg-turner. "He's the boy who wants to come in and remodel the factory. He wants five hundred bones a month to start with."

"Lasset had better be a sport and spend the money. Something ought to be done. I've got five shares of stock that hasn't paid a dividend for ten [illegible]"

The tool grinder gave way to Ames and Tommy with hopeful interest.

"Tommy, here is one machine which is too important to monkey with. To begin with, there should be automatic rests to produce the proper bevel in the grinding. I can tell by the sound of the planer in there that the planer knives are not cutting at the proper angle."

"That's what you told me last week, didn't you, Billy?" asked Tommy.

"Lasset said the firm had made a quarter of a million churns with the tools ground on these wheels," remarked Billy with contempt.

"[illegible]" came through the shop to the grinding room, looked in at the door with a scowl at Ames and Tommy, and went away. Presently a boy came back. Ames was in the engine room listening, with a frown, to an annoying little click in the governor.

"Mr. Lasset wants to see you right away," announced the boy to Tommy.

"Go as far as you like, Ames," invited Tommy. "I'll be back in a few minutes."

Tommy went into the office, and found Lasset in a snarling frame of mind.

"You have to get your friend Ames out of here, and keep him out," he ordered.

"Mr. Ames is a stockholder," returned Tommy, coming around in front of Lasset's desk where he could talk directly at his face. "I gave him a share of stock."

"That's your lookout," snapped Lasset. "The fact that he's a stockholder, however, doesn't give him the right to come in here and disturb the men. Half of them have knocked off work and are standing around, with their tools in their hands, talking. How do you expect Brinley to preserve di[illegible]"

[illegible] "I'm [illegible] going to fire Brinley [illegible] I get rid of our clumsy old machinery."

"You're going to fire him!" shouted Lasset.

"That's what I said," insisted Tommy, laying his fist gently but firmly on the manager's desk. "Now, look here, Lasset. I'm going to talk to you like a Dutch uncle. Will you, or will you not, employ Ames to remodel this factory?"

"Certainly not!" shouted Lasset.

"Then I will!" declared Tommy. "You got me into this concern under the impression that I couldn't be any trouble, because I didn't know anything. In that far you were right; but you didn't take into consideration the fact that I could learn. I'm coming to the next stockholders' meeting, prepared to [illegible] you and Brinley, and then I'm going to run this factory myself. I've discovered that I like the churn business better than billiards."

CHAPTER VI.

The men voted solidly with Tommy at the stockholders' meeting, and Lasset, who had not believed it possible for him to lose, made them a scathing speech in which he predicted disaster of every form and dimension. He was white with rage, and it was only because he did not like the shoulders of either Tommy or Ames that the meeting did not end in a fist fight. He took Brinley with him when he went away, and left the Johnson Churn company to its fate! The next they heard of him he was with the Reverse Gear Churn company, and cutting the price against his old output.

Ames and Tommy plunged their company into debt for new machinery, and, when it came, they closed down the factory long enough to make a thorough rearrangement.

Ames put on overalls and went into the shop. He invented a line of small dairy contrivances and devised some wooden toys to use up their hardwood waste to the last scrap. These things done and put in good running order, he went into the office with Tommy, and, with the same happy energy, put into effect a new selling system, whereby expenses were kept to a minimum and the sales increased.

At this point of his activity, John Ames might be said to be one of the most contented men in existence. Day by day, he saw the fruition of his plans, and, week by week, Tommy Spencer developed from a social idler into the live, keen business man his father's blood entitled him to become. There was something rather sad in Tommy's steadiness these days. Ames tried to drag him into the social activity of which he himself was so much a part, but Tommy showed an unaccountable lack of interest.

"Suit yourself, Tommy," laughed Ames, "but you're only young once, you know. We're getting up a little series of costume dances for the first Friday in each month, and the crowd won't be happy without you."

"I'd rather not, thank you, John," said Tommy hastily. "Ames, I'm trying to figure on a consolidation with the Reverse Gear Churn company. They're our only competitors in this type of churn and there's no reason we should cut each other's throats."

"You're not after Lasset's scalp again, are you?" laughed Ames.

"No," hesitated Tommy. "Say, do you know, I'd like to have Lasset go through our factory now. Why, man, I'm so proud of this plant I make a bore of myself down in the Commercial club. We take rough lumber in at one end and shoot out churns at the other, with the smoothness of a greased bullet. By the way, I think I have a little improvement in our churn, which should make a 10 per cent saving, and give us a better article."

Ames looked down at him with a smile.

"It seems to me that I'm becoming an ornamental man," he observed. "You scarcely need me any more, Tommy."

"I need you forever, old man!" declared Tommy heartily. "You've done wonders for me, Ames, and, within six months, your share of the increased profits will make a fine and dandy income. Why, you're out of debt now, for all the advances you've had."

"Is that so?" laughed Ames. "Give [illegible] thousand, Tommy. Coming back to that series of costume dances, [illegible] join us. Helen says you must. What's the matter that you never get around to Helen's any more? She thinks you're treating her shabbily; and by [illegible], you are."

"I've been so busy," lamely defended Tommy. He mused heavily a moment. "If Helen says I must, I suppose I must," he finally admitted. "When do you begin?"

"The first Friday in next month," said Ames. "I am to see Helen this evening. I'll tell her. She'll be delighted."

Tommy winced internally, but outwardly he smiled most pleasantly.

"I guess I am becoming stupid," he acknowledged.

That evening he regretted his promise. He saw Helen and Ames flashing by in the new touring car which was a part of the extravagant Ames' advances. At first Ames had been the delight of all the girls, but, with the passing of time, he had become more and more devoted to Helen. The two were almost inseparable.

CHAPTER VII.

The first little costume dance was a tremendous success, for everybody but Tommy Spencer. He danced once with Helen, and he thought her tremendously kind to him. He had rather that she had not been. It hurt a little to have her treat him with so much grave consideration. It seemed to him that she, too, had changed somewhat in the past winter. He found her eyes fixed speculatively on him more than once, and he thought them almost wistful at times.

He slipped out for a smoke after that dance [illegible] he wanted to be alone, and he took a seat in a dark corner of the little side porch. The intermissions were rather long, for a lonely person, and in one of them he [illegible] come from the [illegible] heart as [illegible]

Tommy felt a [illegible] he realized what an [illegible] couple they were [illegible] XVI night, and both [illegible] and Helen [illegible] all in white, [illegible] with her powdered hair and gleaming shoulders, and a wide spreading satin gown, and Ames particularly tall and graceful in his pigtail and his knee breeches. They were like a ghostly pair from an old tapestry, as they stepped into the moonlight and Ames' head was bent low over Helen. He was holding her hand in his, and he was talking to her in a very low voice, while Helen's head drooped and her eyes were averted.

Tommy jumped down from the balcony as soon as they had passed, and strode in the opposite direction. He felt the need of rapid exercise, and he walked briskly down through the grape arbor and across through the flower garden, and back up to the fountain. He had just turned the corner of the summer house when he almost ran into Ames and Helen. The tall white courtier was standing in front of Helen, holding both of her hands in his, and, just as Tommy came upon them, Ames bent forward, Helen upturned her face to his and he kissed her on the lips.

Tommy mumbled a hasty apology and started to hurry away, but they both called after him, and gulping down the lump which had leaped in his throat, he turned and came back.

"I'm just bidding good-by to the prettiest girl in town, Tommy," said Ames, in a serious tone. "Helen and I have been tremendous pals, and I'm going to miss all the rest of you more than I can say."

"You're not going away," protested Tommy, bewildered.

"Yes, I find I can't stand it any longer," laughed Ames. "The fun's all gone. I see the same old freight cars backed up on the same old siding every day, and the same old churns."

"But you can't go now," protested Tommy. "The business is just beginning to yield a profit."

"I can find a profit any place," smiled Ames. "You see, Tommy, the churn business never interested me. I only cared for the problem of straightening out its difficulties, and now the puzzle is solved. The blocks are all fitted together, and the only way to enjoy them any further is to tear them all apart again. Better still, for a rover like me, is to wander on and find a new puzzle."

"I thought you were at home here," argued Tommy.

"I don't think I shall ever have a real home," laughed Ames. "I belong to the air, and I have to be free. The only regret I shall have in leaving is for my good friends," and he reached out a hand to both Helen and Tommy.

Helen slipped her other hand in Tommy's arm.

"What about Helen?" Tommy suddenly demanded. "Ames, when a fellow monopolizes a girl's entire time—"

"Why, you silly Tommy!" flared Helen, dropping her hand from his arm. "Is that why you've neglected me all winter?"

"Well, you know, I thought," stammered Tommy.

"And you know I thought," breathlessly interrupted Helen.

"Oh, tut, tut," laughed Ames. "The music's beginning. Helen, will you let Tommy take you to the rest of this series of dances?"

Helen and Tommy looked at each other, then suddenly laughed. Ames turned away and lit a cigarette.

"Helen, that's our two-step," he said. "I'll give it to you, Tommy. Run along."

He laughed as he watched them run into the house, arm in arm. He blew a wreath of smoke at the stars.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEED

That which the world most needs, to-day, is to realize that it needs a Saviour. One who can actually save from the power of satan, now. One upon whom we may depend, when trials and temptations seem too great for us. One who is equal to any emergency that we may be called upon to meet, in our lives. WE HAVE SUCH A ONE IN JESUS CHRIST, OUR SAVIOUR.

The Saviour loves us and is our friend. The devil hates us and is trying to destroy our faith in Jesus Christ. That is his work.

"FOR THIS PURPOSE the Son of God was manifested; that He might destroy the works of the devil." John 3:8.

"Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of His might.

For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Eph. 6:10, 12.

Satan is the instigator of every evil thought, every unkind word, every despicable act; he is the author of all confusion, sickness and sorrow. BUT JESUS CHRIST "is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them. Heb. 7:25.

CLOSING DAYS OF INSTITUTE

Resume of Proceedings Beginning With Last Wednesday Morning

should be a beginning, a discussion and a suitable ending. Remember, we are taching a process, and not a finished product, an art, not a science.

As a rule too much correcting is done by the teacher in composition work. The pupil himself should go over his article paragraph by paragraph and make corrections before handing it to the teacher.

The speaker emphasized the fact that the teacher should always remember he is teaching a mental process; that the language is a by-product and that all the teachers in the school are co-operating in the linguistic situation. The best results do not always come from the English class-room, but from practice in expression and correct linguistic environment.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

After singing by the Institute under direction of Mrs. McClintock, Mrs. Ralph Davis sang beautifully, "The Deserted Garden," and responded to an encore.

Dr. Ziegler, of the State Health Department, occupied the first twenty minutes.

The teacher has assumed a great responsibility in attempting to train the youth of the country. In this training she cannot be successful without a good physical foundation. In the care of the health of the pupils she should insist upon cleanliness of preson nad surroundings, should ventilate thoroughly, watch the temperature, keep the drinking fountains clean, let in plenty of sunlight wherever possible.

Miss Rachel Armstrong, of Philadelphia presented the needs of the Near East and after her address a resolution was adopted by the assembly endorsing the great cause and pledging the co-operation of the teachers in furthering it's interests.

Dr. Matheny followed with an interesting talk on "Bees and Flowers." Mrs. Fetteroff occupied the last period with an address on making school rooms attractive.

On Wednesday evening a very capable company presented "The Climax," which was thoroughly enjoyed by a large audience. The heroine has a wonderfully rich and mellow contralto voice and her rendition of the "Song of the Soul" quite thrilled her hearers. The other members of the cast were equally good in their respective assignments and the offering was generally conceded to be one of the best ever presented here under Lyceum management.

THURSDAY MORNING

After the much needed rain of the night before and still continuing this morning the Institute opened the session with appropriate songs of thanksgiving, following which Rev. George B. VanWaters led the devotionals. Prof. R. L. Butler relieved Superintendent Jones who left to attend the Director's meeting.

Mrs. Fetteroff continued her instruction on drawing at this time, taking up the study of Pose Drawing. A number of Fourth Grade children acted as models of child life. Various positions were taken and drawn by the teachers in the air as they had already practiced in still life. This was the first instruction given in full action. A girl of the 4th grade posed for measurement and proportion. Drawings done by pupils in different grades and poses in various groupings were a part of the exhibits which delighted the audience.

Prof. R. L. Butler, specially presiding, introduced Mr. Shaw who was enthusiastically received by the assembly. His subject was "Our Public Schools."

Mr. Shaw said that the greatest thing in the world is a human soul and the greatest work is the helpful touch upon a soul. A teacher will be an absolute failure unless she is religious.

Children in the public schools must be taught to think clearly. A teacher holding a position in one school for a long period is able to show better results than can be obtained by a shifting about from one school to another. In the former instance she has an opportunity to determine with reasonable accuracy what particular subject most appeals to individual pupils and, if she is sincere in her endeavor, she will see to it that the pupil is offered an opportunity to develop along the line that he is interested in.

John W. Rider, of the federal governmnet service was made the man he was, invaluable to his country, by the stimulating interest inspired in him by his teacher, who saw to it that he was provided with the proper books to best develop his particular bent. There are many other notable examples of men, risen to great heights in the business and professional life of our country, who owe their success to the sincere interest taken in them by the public school teacher.

Mr. Shaw rather startled his audience when he stated that out of every 100 pupils entering the public schools, but nine complete the course. There are 35,000 pupils in our schools today who can not do the elementary work, but they could do other very important work along the lines of mechanics, if properly trained.

Pennsylvania's big problem is not the road building, with its attendant bond issue, which is of course very important, nor the improvement of conditions in agricultural communities, also very important, nor any of the other big questions being agitated—our State's greatest problem today is taking charge of our boys and girls in the public schools and properly training them to eventually assume the important places in our State and nation—the training which is their's by right. "Give the best to the world and the best will come back to you," says Mr. Shaw.

After this splendid exhibition which was followed by music Dr. Matheny continued his instruction which is always a recreation. Science teaching should be done with exhibits in which the children have a part in the selection and mounting and he cited and illustrated many such exhibits or specimens that could be easily handled; specimens of rotten teeth; moth specimens, showing how the animal clothes himself in the garment upon which it feeds making very often a [illegible] many colors. Carbon bisulphide [illegible] disinfectant for moths.

A phoebe's nest is easily obtained and the nest of red-eyed variole, that weaves strips of newspapers in its nest, may be found in the bushes. Hamilton Gibson has called the bird a "preacher bird" because of finding a piece of a bible on which was written "the will of God" in its nest. The name still holds.

These specimens of various kinds, milkweed, cattails moths etc., may be mounted on old glass photographer's negatives.

You may make beautiful trays by mounting grasses, cattails butterflies and milkweed which if bought in a store would bring a high price.

Spiders are a most interesting study—those especially termed the morning spider who on his web which he throws out sails away into the sky, being the pioneer aviator. The spider who hangs his web in your door is your friend because he is catching flies and his bite is not nearly so harmful as a mosquito bite.

"Study trees this fall," says Dr. Matheney, "and learn to know trees without their leaves. Pupils should know them in their winter condition. "He that plants a tree is a servant of God," said Henry VanDyke. Literature of trees and their planting may be had from State College.

Knowledge of common poisonous weeds should be taught in the school. For a protection the child should be taught to know them.

At the directors meeting held on Thursday the following resolutions were adopted:

"Whereas, we, the school directors of Tioga County wish to thank the County Superintendent and the Assistant Superintendent for the able instruction which they have provided for the institute and for their excellent work during the year in the schools and,

"Whereas music and drawing are to be taught in our schools, we recommend that the school directors see these are taught in all districts and that teacher be furnished with all suitable material, and,

"Whereas, the school directors are a most powerful body, that they co-operate with the teacher having in mind, always the physical mental and spiritual good of the pupils, and,

"Whereas the foremost thing in our original state is law enforcement, we see the great need of teaching respect for our government in the public schools. Therefore to make it effective and to receive the most good, we urge that the directors closely co-operate with the officials in creating sentiment for the enforcement of the law."

THURSDAY AFTERNOON

After the opening exercises Miss [illegible] Grammick, Department of [illegible] Harrisburg, presented her subject, Geography, and very ably discussed the teaching of this branch of study.

"First of all we should have the best trained teachers available in our schools and not be satisfied until we do was an all important statement.

In teaching use various tools, specimen, picture, verbal, maps graft. Each point was explained carefully.

A teacher must measure character building by bringing out initiative and co-operation. It is our, (the teachers) job to develop this aspect of co-operation among the pupils and she illustrated methods to develop these aspects of character building. Do in school as you would in any kind of business: plan your work and then accomplish that work in a given time.

Dr. Matheny in continuation of his lecture on "Science and Play" illustrated his theme with unique examples of handicraft fashioned from ordinary tin cans. A ukulele made from a tomato can, by cutting the lid and turning back the edges, produced considerable harmony when properly handled. A large can is made to serve very acceptably as a fireless cooker by the [illegible] between teacher and the hot stones. In this connection the speaker explained that after fashioning this fireless cooker it could be used to supply hot lunches for teacher and pupil and by this means the former could, without effort, impart to the child a knowledge of table etiquette. An icy-hot receptacle was as easily constructed and its manifold uses explained.

Dr. Matheny exhibited also a wheat grader made from a cigar box, another ukulele and various other useful and ornamental articles drawing interesting word pictures showing the relationship between these exhibits and his subject—the science of teaching.

An iceless refrigerator is constructed by wrapping canton flannel about a box frame and setting it in a pan of cold water. When the outside temperature is 75, it is found to be 35 inside this practical arrangement. This method is being adopted in the built-in refrigerators much in use in city apartments.

Dr. Matheny's illustration of rope making and the comparative ease with which the necessary apparatus is constructed was interesting indeed and was a most practical example of what a pupil can do, under a proper instruction, by way of making useful things. The instructor performed scientific experiments illustrative of his points and gave to the assembly a real working knowledge of some of the more simple examples in rudimentary science.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Thursday evening the assembly enjoyed an oratorical contest in which picked contestants from the first and second class high schools of the County took part. The program of speaking was interspersed with music by the Wellsboro high school orchestra, Ted Kathan, violinist, and the local high school glee club.

Following a deliberation of half an hour the judges awarded the prize in the first girls' contest to Dorothy Bastian and the boys' prize to Malcolm Payne. In the second contest the girls' prize went to Celia Clevelson, but the boys' contest was declared a draw.

FRIDAY MORNING

The devotional exercises were in charge of Rev. Glenn C. Davis of the Church of Christ. After the reading from the third and fourth chapters of Proverbs and singing by the Institute, Superintendent Jones announced that because of the press of business which must be transacted after the program, he would limit Miss Grammick to thirty minutes and Dr. Matheny and Mrs. Fetteroff to twenty minutes each.

Continuing her talk on Geography Miss Grammick said, [illegible] a study of great peoples not of people Places are studied only as they affect nations. After studying France, study all her dependencies, no matter where located. Start your study always with the contacts of the child. To illustrate her method she gave a lesson on "Lumbering" to a group of Fourth Grade pupils.

She also distributed to the teachers of Geography the bulletins on the subject from the Department of Public Instruction and gave them samples of the Geographic News Bulletin with advertisements of the publications of the National Geographic Society—which would prove helpful on their work.

Mrs. Fetteroff gave an exhibit of posters done by printing in the First Grade and of designs for needle books, penwipers, note books, etc. She insisted that every child should work at a different design and in different colors.

Dr. Matheny said he had been complimented for his "gift." Possession of any natural gift in teaching or speaking he disclaimed. On the contrary for years he had found the attempt to talk to an audience extremely difficult. Finally he discovered the secret—to lose all thought of one's self in his subject and in his interest in the child. Too many failures result from "seeking the kingdom of Heaven" for the sake of the things which "will be added." For real, successful happy work the "things to be added" must be entirely forgotten.

He continued, all who attended the Institute and carried away many new ideas were divided into three classes: Those who regarded the instruction trivial or very easy to follow; those who considered the goal two difficult of attainment; a third group, of whom he hoped there were many.

The remainder of the sessino was devoted to business.

Prof. R. L. Butler and Miss Eleanor Donovan were re-elected President and Secretary of the State Teachers' Association. Prof. Butler and Mrs. June Reep were re-elected auditors; J. C. VanVechten, E. Mae Hughes, and Bertha M. Roff were elected delegates to the State Association which will meet in Philadelphia during the holidays. Ballots were passed to members of the Retirement Association that they might vote for members of that Board.

After thanking the teachers for their attitude of attention and interest and heir very good attendance and behavior, Superintendent Jones declared the Institute adjourned.

The following resolutions were drafted by the Committee which had been appointed for the purpose and were adopted by the Institute:

Whereas, through the infinite goodness of the Most Hight we have been permitted to assemble in this, our 56th Annual Institute, it is with hearts full of gratitude that we make the following resolutions:

1.—We sincerely thank our worthy Superintendent, Mr. M. F. Jones, for the splendid efforts which he has put forth in providing us with such superior instruction and entertainment and for conducting the Institute in a manner creditable to the great county of Tioga. We also wish to thank our Assistant Superintendent, Mr. J. G. March, for helping to make this one of the best Institutes on record.

2.—We entered our heart-felt thanks to our able Instructors for their messages of cheer, of encouragement and of educational progress. Their valuable instruction and the mingling of our co-workers have given us much inspiration, and we shall return with greater zeal to do more efficient work.

3.—Likewise, we wish to express our sincere gratitude to the citizens of Wellsboro who have given us royal welcome and have opened their homes to us in generous hospitality.

4.—We feel that special mention of the very efficient work done by our musical director, Mrs. McClintock, should be made. Each year we receive greater enthusiasm to improve the music in our schools; also, we wish to thank our pianists, Mrs. Green and Miss Nickerson and all who took part in the various musical numbers. We extend to Mrs. Green our sympathy in her sad bereavement.

5.—We recommend that all teachers of Tioga County continue their efforts in promoting the work of the Junior Red Cross.

6.—We extend a welcome to those who are entering the profession of teaching and we feel that they will strive to maintain the high standard of the schools of Tioga County.

7.—We approve of the steps taken by the Institute in furthering the work of the Near East Relief and we encourage all the teachers to do their utmost.

8.—We again urge the teachers to put forth their best efforts in the sale of the Christmas Seals.

9.—We endorse the Extension Coufses offered by our State Schools and Colleges not overlooking the excellent work being done by the Mansfield State Normal School in this district.

TO THE REPUBLICAN VOTERS OF TIOGA COUNTY

The purpose of the primary election is to give the voters of a political party the opportunity to make their selection of candidates to represent the party at the following general election.

At the primary election held on September 18 there were eight candidates asking for the Republican nomination for the office of County Commissioner. This primary was participated in by a larger number of Republican voters than at any previous primary and resulted in the nomination of Ralph B. Baity and Fred G. Brown. No allegation has been or can be made that this election was not honestly conducted for that the nominations are not regular and legal. However, one of the candidates seeking a renomination, Mr. Crawford, who is now serving his eighth year as Commissioner, is not willing to abide by the decision of the Republican voters to whom he submitted his candidacy and is now running as an independent candidate for the office. Not one of the defeated candidates in either 1915 or 1919, when he was a nominee, resorted to such ends to defeat the will of the Republican voters as expressed at the primaries in those years, and there is no justification for his attempt at this time to defeat either Baity or Brown, the fairly nominated candidates. Had he been nominated on September 18 it is easy to imagine what he and his friends would have thought had one of the defeated candidates announced himself an independent candidate for Commissioner. Ralph B. Baity and Fred G. Brown are men of character and integrity and high standing throughout the county and all qualified to serve the best interests of the tax payers as County Commissioners during the coming four years.

Will Hubbard the Republican nominee for County Treasurer, has independent opposition for the election in the candidacy of Matthew Waddell, a defeated candidate for the office at the recent primary. Mr. Hubbard's qualifications for the office are admitted and his election conceded.

I would urge the Republican voters to attend the election on November 8 and vote the Straight Republican ticket.

EVAN P. REES, Chairman,
Republican County Committee.

Governor Pinchot Puts Blame for Non-Enforcement on Permit System.

Governor Pinchot has placed squarely upon the federal permit system the blame for what he terms "the breakdown of federal prohibition enforcement in Pennsylvania."

In addressing A. W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, the Governor, said:

"The people of the State are being affronted by open defiance of the law," which he said is mainly due to the quantities of liquor withdrawn under federal permits over which the State has no control..

"You, as secretary of the treasury," Mr. Pinchot's letter said, "have the power to cut this flood of liquor off at the source by revoking these permits and by refusing to issue others except upon conditions sufficient, with honest enforcement, to make violations substantially impossible. As governor of Pennsylvania, I have no such power."

The governor then rehearses the deliberations at the recent conference of governors in Washington and adds:

"The people of your State and mine are being affronted by open defiance of the law. This reign of disorder, which is having most serious consequences, is mainly due to the huge quantities of alcoholic liquids and illegal drinks turned loose from plants operating under federal permits, revoked, or dealt with in any way by State authorities. You, as secretary of the treasury, have the power to cut this flood of liquor off at the source by revoking these permits, and by refusing to issue others except upon conditions sufficient, with honest enforcement, to make violations substantially impossible.. I, as governor of Pennsylvania, have no such power..

"You will understand, I am sure, my earnest desire for the fullest cooperation with the federal authorities. I have done all I know how to do to work with them. But as governor of this commonwealth, in honor bound to use every power I have for the welfare of its people. I cannot remain silent if the federal government, under whose present activities these conditions have arisen, contiues doing as it has done before."

Mr. Mellon in a reply to the Governor, made public on Tuesday, says in part:

"Before a question had been raised by you, I had already directed that a survey of breweries and of the allowances of alcohol for non beverage purposes be made in the State of Pennsylvania and you may be assured that it is my purpose to do all that I can to enforce the law and faithfully co-operate with you in that undertaking in the State of Pennsylvania. But I am, with great respect, constrained to say that it would stand all concerned in better stead if energies were expended in a sincere effort, in the first place, to find what the real facts are as to those who are charged with the duty of enforcement, and next to enforce the law as best we can, at the same time, to recognize the futility of unjustified criticism based upon an imperfect understanding of the facts.

FRANK E. REINWALD

of Gaines Township

Candidate for County Commissioner

General Election, Tuesday, Nov. 6

YOUR VOTE AND INFLUENCE WILL BE GREATLY APPRECIATED

GREAT AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY.

Its Tremendous Growth Makes Additional Highways Necessary.

According to figures now available, experts contend that automobile production for 1923 will reach four million vehicls, a 60% increase over the record breaking production of last year. Four wheel brakes, sweeping changes in general design, radical departure in the transmission construction and fast succeeding price reductions are regarded by those in the industry as the opening guns of a battle for supremacy that will be hotly waged in the coming year.

The pace in this battle of manufacturers, according to business experts, is being set by Henry Ford who has a program calling for the building of 2,000,000 cars during a six months period beginning October 1. This means that Ford's factories must turn out an average of 13,000 vehicles every working day.

There are already 13,000,000 motor vehicles on the road in the United States and, in spite of the generous highway building programs being carried out, the matter of congested traffic is going to be a serious question when the 5,000,000 additional cars and trucks take to the road during the next year.

Pennsylvania, in anticipation of this question is going to pass a $50,000,000 road bond issue at the November election and will thus show evidence the desire of her inhabitants to provide as adequately as may be for the increased traffic that is bound to come with the great number of motor vehicles that manufacturers say will be produced the comitg year.

Beauty originates in your own thought.

ENDORSE BOND ISSUE.

Pennsylvania's Senators Urge the Continuance of Road Program.

Both of Pennsylvania's United States Senators have endorsed the proposed $50,000,000 road bond issue which will be passed upon by the voters of the state at the coming November election.

"Approval of the $50,000,000 road bond issue," says Senator Pepper, "will mean a continuation of that splendid progress which has been made since the first bond issue of 1918 was authorized by the people.

"No state can advance industrially faster than its road program in this age of rapid transportation. To retard the progress now under way of failure to provide necessary funds would be an economic error, for it would hit that vital feature of modern civilization. It would be like walking backwards.

"The improved highway touches directly or indirectly the social, the economic, and the financial interests of every resident of the state. To the farmer it makes accessible the social, educational and commercial opportunities of the city. To the city worker it offers a helpful method of distributing the products of the factory and industrial establishment. It enhances land values. It encourages travel within the commonwealth and from other states. It brings all men closer together.

"To continue the excellent road program now under way is to make a valuable investment in the welfare of Pennsylvania."

Senator David A. Reed:

"I expect to vote in favor of this proposition myself and I earnestly hope that the majority of the voters will do the same, for I know of no expenditure of public money more necessary or more beneficial to the people at large."

Former Senator John S. Fisher, of Indiana, who is president of the Associated Highways Organization of Pennsylvania, said his information is to the effect that the "Yes" vote for the bond issue will have a majority of 400,000.

The constitutional amendment providing for the bond issue is the second of four on the November ballot.

ORGANIZATION CODE UPHELD.

Dauphin County Court Says it is Constitutional.

Constitutionality of the administration reorganization code was upheld by the Dauphin county court recently in deciding cases brought by Attorney General Woodruff to compel payment of salaries to employes of four bureaus created by the code and injunction suits instituted by State Treasurer Snyder to restrain certain boards from functioning.

Discussing the code, which Mr. Snyder claimed was unconstitutional on the ground that the title does not clearly express the subject matter, the decision held that "after a most careful and painstaking consideration which we have given to this statute, we are not satisfied that, generally speaking, the act contains more than one subject. The question is not free from doubt, but that doubt we must resolve in favor of the statute. Confining, however, the attack on the constitutionality of the statute to so much of it as is directly involved in the requisitions which are made the basis of the proceeding in this case, we find no unconstitutional provisions."

The decision made it plain that the court was not "to be considered as expressing any opinion for or against the wisdom of the administrative code." It declared, in considering the questions as to whether it contained only one subject clearly expressed in its title, "we have no exact precedent to follow. We must blaze a new trail. This is the most ambitious and comprehensive piece of legislation that has ever been undertaken, to our knowledge in the legislature history of Pennsylvania."

Former Lieutenant Governor E. E. Beidleman, one of Mr. Snyder's attorneys, said immediately after the decision was handed down that an appeal to the higher courts would be taken. The local court, it is understood, is prepared to grant a supersedeas, which will hold the Dauphin county court's decision in abeyance until the questions finally are settled by the supreme court.

FOUR PROFITS TO WHOLESALER

Coal Commission's Report Shows Great Increase to Wholesalers.

An associated press dispatch from Washington, in commenting on the report of the coal commission, recently filed, says that wholesalers in the industry, have been taking profits at a rate over their pre-war margin, while retail coal dealers have been taking less.

Taking 1913 as a base, the commission found that the average wholesaler, who distributed coal without physically handling the shipments, made a profit of 3.6 cents per ton handled, and made an annual return on total capital invested in his business of 19 per cent. In 1920 the 332 wholesalers in the United States whose books the commission examined, took a profit of 15 cents per ton, and made 55.2 per cent on the capital invested in their business. The year 1920, however, was the "banner year" in the business, the report said, adding that the figures were smaller in other years.

The chief addition to coal prices, the commission found, resulted from the handling about of coal shipments during shortages from one wholesaler to another, with two, three and sometimes four wholesale profits being taken enroute. Its inquiry resulted in the tracing out of a large number of such operations, particularly involving anthracite shipping to New England during the winter of 1922-23, after the coal strike.

Average rates of retail profits on coal since 1918, the commission said, have been "generally moderate and much less than those of wholesalers." Net profits per ton handled and profits on investments alike for retailers were said to "have shown a tendency to decrease" since 1913.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Barbara Bronell Coming.—Barbara Bronell, a youngster, who only a couple of seasons or so ago made her stage debut, is starring this season in a brand new musical extravanganza, entitled, "My China Doll," which will be presented at the Bache Auditorium Saturday night, Nov. 3rd. Miss Bronell, who hails from the West, is a Spokane girl and a university graduate. Her first engagement of importance was with Julian Eltinge and company on his tour to the Orient, where her dancing won unstinted praise. Returning to the States, she toured Alaska and then came her first trip east, where she accepted an engagement to be featured in the popular musical success, "Listen To Me." This was her first tour of the States and was hailed by press and public as a "find"—a girl still in her 'teens who could sing and act while her dancing proved a revelation to the most blase theatregoer. She possesses the first requisite to success—youth, combined with a man's size bundle of talent this little Miss lacks not in personality and dances with the same grace and charm as America's greatest danseuse. "My China Doll" was written as a starring vehicle for Miss Bronell, the author Charles George keeping in view her remarkable personality. The several characters she enacts, namely, a youthful Chinese girl, a rose maid in the land of flowers, Miss Ragtime in melodytown, Cinderella in the land of the story books and a debutante in a fashionable uptown home in New York, offer her every opportunity to display her ability as an actress, comedienne and dancer. She will be supported by a brilliant company and corps de ballet of remarkable dancers. No more gorgeously mounted production has been sent on tour this season than "My China Doll." It is the last word in extravanganza and spectacle combined, and will serve as a remarkable vehicle for this bewitching little artist.

A Notable Address.

The first of a series of informal talks by inspiring men will be given November 23rd by Dr. Samuel Zane Batten, of Philadelphia, on the subject, "Who Owns The Coal?" Dr. Batten is a leader in social service work in the Baptist Church and is a writer and speaker of peculiar power. He has a national reputation as an interpreter of modern problems in the light of Christianity. He has many engagements to speak before colleges and societies, but has consented to come here because of his friendship for Rev. C. W. Macgeorge. The meeting is being arranged by the combined clubs of the borough in conjunction with the ministerial association. Those who wish a thrilling evening, with the opportunity of questions, will set aside this date. A cordial invitation is also extended to those interested in the other towns of the county.

—Never threaten to kiss a girl unless you make good. Most girls hate a bluffer.

Tioga County Baby Clinics.

When Dr. Chas. H. Miner, head of the State Health Department at Harrisburg, was here recently, Dr. C. W. Sheldon brought him in to see Miss Edith Lewis, our very efficient State Nurse. He expressed great pleasure and satisfaction at the careful and systematic manner in which her records and charts were kept in connection with her tuberculosis work, and the Well Baby Centres established throughout this County.

It may be of interest to know that the first "Well Baby Centre" was started in Wellsboro, in October, 1920. Then followed one in Blossburg, Mansfield, Morris Run and Westfield, and there are now over 600 babies and children of pre-school age enrolled on the records. These clinics are held monthly in the various towns and the children measured and weighed and examined by the local doctors, who have, almost without exception, given this work their co-operation and support.

It is very gratifying to know that the State Health Department realize the importance of this work, and intend paying a small fee to the attending physician for his services at these clinics for the ensuing year; the following year the State department will pay one- half of the amount, and will ask the local centres to pay the other half. The third year it is hoped the different communities can pay the full amount. The hearty co-operation of the women where "Well Baby Centres" have been started, have helped make these health activities a success.

The Tioga County Tuberculosis Society have so far furnished the equipment for these Centres as well as the salary of the Dental Hygienist who attends to the mouth hygiene of the pupils in our schools, and supplys milk to school children underweight. The work of this Society is financed entirely by the sale of Health Bonds and Christmas Seals.

First Baptist Church.

Members of the Missionary Society, attention. The November meeting will be held one week earlier than usual, on Wednesday the 7th, instead of the 14th. Also note that Mrs. George Bro.. will act as hostess in place of Mrs. P. P. Korb, as stated in the year-book. This change is on account of "hooping-cough" in the home. This "hooping-cough" is portant, and a full attendance is earnestly requested. Plans for the Loyalty Luncheon must be completed at this time.

Ordinance of the Lord's Supper next Sunday morning. Every baptized Christian should participate.

Are you in your place in the Bible School this fall? The lessons are grouped about the theme, The Missionary Teaching of the Bible. Take your place, do your bit, the blessing will follow.

The pastor's Bible Study class meets every Monday evening at the parsonage. The third chapter of the Letter to the Romans will be the study next week. Frank discussion and diligent searching of the Book are a part of every session. The joy of learning and the inspiration that always accompanies a better understanding more than repay all effort and sacrifice involved in attending a Monday evening class.

The Strange Practice of King Richard III

A SIDELIGHT ON BANKING DISCLOSED BY A CHANCE DISCOVERY

"The King can do no wrong," was the old saying, but King Richard must have caused many of his hosts and hostesses deep chagrin because he insisted upon taking his own bed on all his travels. Everywhere that Richard went the bed was sure to go.

One night he slept at the old Blue Boar Inn of Leicester—in his own bed as was his custom. The next day he was killed in battle. The bed became the property of the inn. One hundred years later, it was disclosed that the King's strange custom was no slur upon English hospitality, but rather a sad commentary upon 15th century banking.

While the innkeeper's wife was hastily making up the bed, several coins dropped on the floor. This led to the discovery of £300 in gold, a sum which might now be equivalent to about £5000, nearly $24,000. The King's bed was his bank.

The act of Assembly regulating the nomination and election of public officers, etc., approved June 10, 1893, provides as follows:

Section 14. The face of every ballot which shall be printed in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall contain the names of all candidates whose nomination for any office specified in the ballot shall have been duly made, except such as may have died or withdrawn, arranged as hereinafter provided.

The Act of Assembly, approved the 29th day of April, 1903, amending the acts of 1893 and 1897, provides as follows:

Section 14. When Presidential electors are to be voted for, the names of the candidates for presidential electors shall be arranged in party groups, as presented in the several certificates of party nomination and nomination papers, and the groups shall be printed upon the ballot in order of the vote obtained in the State, at the last Presidential election, by the parties nominating, beginning with the party which obtained the highest vote: Provided, That in the case of political parties not represented on the ballot in the last Presidential election, the order of arrangement shall be alphabetically.

At the head of each group of candidates shall be printed the appropriate party name or political appellation, together with the surnames of the candidates fo such party for President and Vice-President, underneath which shall be printed the names of the appropriate candidates for Presidential electors.

At the right of the space containing the surnames of the candidates for President and Vice President, and their party name or political appellation, there shall be a square of sufficient size for the convenient insertion of a cross-mark (X), and at the right of the name of each candidate for Presidential elector, there shall be a similar, but smaller square.

The names of candidates for all other offices, shall, in all cases, be arranged under the title of the office for which they are candidates and be printed in the order of the votes obtained for the head of the respective tickets of the parties or bodies nominating at the last Presidential election, beginning with the party obtaining the highest vote: Provided, That in case of parties not represented on the ballot at the last Presidential election, the names of the nominees of such parties shall be arranged alphabetically, according to the party name or political appellation. At the right of the name of each nominee or candidate, shall be printed the name or appellation of the political party presenting or nominating him, and at the right of each party name, or political appellation, there shall be a square of sufficient size for the convenient insertion of a cross-mark.

Whenever any candidate shall receive more than one nomination for the same office, his name shall be printed once, and the names of each political party, so nominating him, shall be printed to the right of the name of such candidate, arranged in the same order as candidates names are grouped, that is to say, in the order of the votes obtained by such party at the last preceding Presidential election, beginning with the party obtaining the highest vote. If such candidate shall be nominated by any political party not represented on the ballot in the last Presidential election, the name of such parties shall follow the other names, and be arranged alphabetically, according to the party name or appellation. At the right of every party name, or political appellation, shall be a square of sufficient size for the convenient insertion of a cross-mark.

There shall be left at the end of the groups of candidates for presidential electors, and of the list of candidates for each different office, (or under the title of the office itself for which an election is to be held, in case there be no candidates legally nominated therefor,) as many blank spaces as there are persons to be voted, for, by each voter for such office, in which space the voter may insert the name of any person whose name is not printed on the ballot, as a candidate for such office, and such insertion shall count as a vote without the cross-mark hereinafter mentioned.

Whenever the approval of a constitutional amendment or other question is submitted to the vote of the people, such questions shall be printed upon the ballots in a brief form and followed by the words, "yes" and "no," and if such question be submitted at an election of public officers, it shall be printed after the list of candidates.

The ballot shall be so printed as to give to each voter a clear opportunity to designate his choice of candidates by a cross-mark (X) in a square of sufficient size at the right of the name of each candidate and inside the line inclosing the column, and in like manner answers to the questions submitted by similar marks in squares at right of the words "yes" and "no," and on the ballot may be printed instructions how to mark and such words as will aid the voter to do this, as "mark one," "mark two," and the like: Provided, That a voter may designate his choice of an entire group of candidates for Presidential electors by one cross-mark (X) in a larger square, which shall be placed at the right of the names of the candidates for President and Vice President at the head of such group, and such mark shall be equivalent to a mark against every name in the group. Provided, further, That a voter may designate his choice of all the candidates, as nominated by one political party, there shall be printed on the extreme left of the ballot, and separated from the rest of the ballot by a space of at least one-half inch, a list of all the political parties or groups of nominees, represented on such ballot and presenting candidates to be voted for at such election. Such names shall be arranged in the order of the votes obtained, at the last Presidential election, by the candidate at the head of the respective tickets of the parties or bodies nominating, beginning with the party that received the highest number of votes cast. Following the names of such political parties shall be the names of the parties or principles not presented on the ballot at the Presidential election, arranged alphabetically, according to the party name or political appellation. A square, of sufficient size for the convenient insertion of a cross-mark, shall be placed at the right of each party name or appellation. Every mark within such square shall be equivalent to a mark against every name designated by that political appellation, or party name, including candidates nominated by more than one party, or group of citizens.

At the head of every ballot shall be printed the following instructions:

To vote a straight party ticket, mark a cross (X) in the square opposite the name of the party of your choice, in the first column. A cross-mark in the square opposite the name of any candidate, indicates a vote for the candidate.

Sec. 16 of the Non-Partisan Act, approved July 24, 1913, says: "At the head of every official ballot furnished for an election at which any candidates for any office within the provisions of this act is to be voted for, there shall be printed, immediately after the instructions now by law required to be printed thereon, the following additional instructions in the same size type, to wit: A cross (X) in the party square in the first column DOES NOT carry a vote for any judge or for any other offices for which candidates have been nominated under the provisions of this act. To vote for Judge mark a cross (X) opposite the name of the candidate desired."

Section 15. All the ballots used at the same voting place at any election shall be alike, and shall be at least six inches long and four inches wide; they shall be printed with the same kind or kinds of type, (which shall not be smaller than the size known as "brevier" or eight-point body,) upon white paper, without any impression or mark to distinguish one from another, and of sufficient thickness to prevent the printed matter from showing through. Each ballot shall be attached to a stub or counterfoil, and all the ballots for the same voting place shall be bound together in convenient numbers in books, in such manner that each ballot may be detached and removed separately.

On the back of each ballot, or on the right-hand side of the back, if the ballot is printed in two columns, there shall be printed as a caption "official ballot for" followed by the designation of the voting place for which the ballot is prepared, the date of the election and a fac-simile of the signatures of the County Commissioners of the respective counties who have caused the ballots to be printed. A record of the number of ballots printed and furnished to each voting place shall be kept and preserved by the County Commissioners of the several counties. When it is shown by affidavit that mistake or omission has occurred in the publication of names or description of candidates or in the printing of the ballots the Court of Common Pleas of the district or County or any Judge thereof, may, upon the application of any qualified elector of the district or county, require the County Commissioners to correct the mistake or omission, or to show cause why they should not.

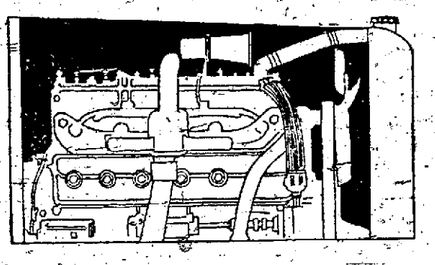
JEWETT SIX

PAIGE-BUILT

$1065 f. o. b. factory



The Sturdy New Jewett Six Has the Power of $1200-$1500 Cars

THE new Jewett's 50 horse-power Paige-built motor has 249 cubic inches piston displacement. This is 20% more displacement—which means more power—than any car of Jewett's size, or within $200 of Jewett's price. And it is long-lived, smooth power. High-pressure oiling system forces 2 gallons of oil per minute through all main and connecting rod bearings. Friction is reduced to nil. Wear and noise are far distant indeed.

Try the new Jewett out against any car you choose. Jewett will accelerate from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds, in high gear. It will beat the time of most any car up any hill. No other car holds so many hill-climbing records as the Jewett.

Do not look for the equal of Jewett power in any "light" six. Likewise, do not look for equal of Jewett ruggedness and dependability in a "light" six. A "light" six is a car weighing from 200 to 400 pounds less than Jewett, with a light, small-bore, low-power motor. A Jewett Six is a strong, heavily built rugged automobile—it is the equal in the essentials of satisfaction to cars costing as high as $1500.

Let us show you what satisfaction you get out of driving a really powerful car—when it has the weight and strength to give you comfortable riding and lasting fine performance. Call us any time for your demonstration. [613]

WHERE THE MONEY GOES

State Highway Department Has Many Places to Spend Millions.

"Why borrow $50,000,000 to build roads when in five years the automobile fees will amount to $70,000,000?" an inquirer wrote William Jennings, of Harrisburg, secretary of the Associated Highways Organization of Pennsylvania. Mr. Jennings told him as follows:

"There are 10,300 miles of State Highway, which the State Highway Department must maintain. Of that total 5047 miles are of earth, on which the maintenance cost per year from fence to fence will average $400 per mile. Over 2700 miles are of macadam, on which maintenance cost runs from $500 per mile per year to $4000 per mile per year, depending upon the amount of travel. The balance is of concrete, asphalt, brick or similar material, and the maintenance cost from fence to fence is in the neighborhood of $200 per mile per year. Because of insufficient state revenues, the money for township rewards is being taken from this automobile fund. Certain salaries must also be paid from it. So when the year rolls by $12,000,000 of the $14,000,000 is gone."

"And $2,000,000 is left?"

"Yes; but there are 'replacements' to be made."

"What do you mean by replacements?"

"The replacement of worn-out macadam sections of State Highways with modern type pavements, when the traffic demands it. The 2700 miles of waterbound macadam mentioned must be replaced at an early day, because the type is not sufficient for modern travel. This will cost $150,000,000. The Highway Department considers these replacements a proper maintenance charge, the money to come from automobile license revenues. When you recall the last legislature's appropriation to the State Highway Department was only $24,000, you will understand why all the automobile license money is needed for State Highway and State-aid maintenance."

PENNSYLVANIA FARMERS FAVOR NEW ROAD BONDS

Information from Harrisburg is to the effect that prominent agriculturists of Pennsylvania are supporting the proposed $50,000,000 bond issue for roads.

J. A. Rose, of Harrisburg, is secretary and treasurer of the Pennsylvania Threshermen and Farmers' Protective Association, a very influential organization. He is a vice president of the Associated Highways Organization of Pennsylvania. In accepting a vice presidency he said on September 17, 1923:

"I believe the Highway Department can be depended on to use the proceeds from this bond issue in an economical and businesslike manner that will give us the maximum mileage of good roads for the money."

Frank P. Willits, treasurer of the Pennsylvania State Grange, declares his belief that the voters of the state "will certainly approve the $50,000,000 road bond loan."

Abe's Best Joke.

Abe requests us to reprint his best joke, about the monkey in the restaurant that grabbed his half-dollar and swallowed it.

"It made me so durned mad," said Abe, "that I picked the monkey up by the hind legs and shook him good, and before I got through I shook $2.— change out of him."

Curiosity.

"Daddy, can you still do tricks?"

"What do you mean, my son, 'do tricks'?"

"Well, I heard mamma say that when you were young you used to drink like a fish."

BOND ISSUE WILL MEAN 1335 MILES OF NEW HIGHWAY

Many Miles of Mud to be Ended When Voters Approve Road Loan.

COUNTIES TO BENEFIT THROUGH 50-50 PLAN

William Jennings, Harrisburg, Hears of Very Little Opposition to Proposition.

Not less than 1335 additional miles of durable, modern type road will be built in Pennsylvania if the voters November 6 approve the proposition to bond the state for an additional $50,000,000, according to William Jennings, of Harrisburg, Secretary of the Associated Highways Organization of Pennsylvania.

"Since the approval of the first bond issue in 1916," said Mr. Jennings, "Pennsylvania has built over 2100 miles of modern type road. Some of this highway has been built by counties, but the major portion of it has been under the direction of the State Highway Department. No other state in the Union has made such a record.

"There is little doubt in my mind that the voters will give the new bond issue an even greater majority than they did the first one. No opposition is heard. The proposed road loan is not a political issue. It is not being backed by any political party or faction, but by all of them. The list of associations which comprise the Associated Highways Organization includes every road association in the state, all of the motor clubs, the township supervisors association, the county commissioners organization; there are representatives of the State Grange, and individuals prominent now and heretofore in affairs of the state government.

"It should interest Pennsylvanians to know that Paul D. Wright, Secretary of Highways, has announced that if the $50,000,000 bond issue is approved, $10,000,000 will be set aside to meet the counties on a 50-50 basis in the construction or reconstruction of roads of secondary importance. In other words, the county commissioners if they meet the state's allocation for their particular counties, dollar for dollar, will be able to improve such secondary roads as they choose. The state's $10,000,000 plus the counties' $10,000,000 will build badly needed secondary roads which, tying in with the state's primary system, will go a great ways toward adding more miles of Pennsylvania roads."

MANY MARVELOUS MILES OF SCENIC SPLENDORS

Since the voters of Pennsylvania in 1918 approved the first bond issue the State Highway Department has supervised the construction of 2100 miles of durable highway, over a thousand miles being paid for from bond issue money.

The major portion of the new mileage is in those sections of the state which prior to 1919 had the least mileage of improved road. It is now possible to travel 1600 miles in Pennsylvania on improved highway without repeating any part of the journey. Altogether there are 9217 miles of improved State Highway. It is possible to travel from Pittsburgh to Erie on hard road; from the Maryland line through Harrisburg and Sunbury to the New York line; from Philadelphia to the New York line south of Binghamton; from the Ohio line to the New York line, through Erie; from Meadville to Pittsburgh via Greenville and New Castle; from the William Penn Highway at Water street to the Susquehanna Trail at Williamsport; from Sunbury to Binghamton via Wilkes-Barre and Scranton; from Pittsburgh to Washington, Pa.; From Greensburg to Washington via Uniontown; from Harrisburg to Lancaster and Philadelphia; from Harrisburg to Reading and Philadelphia; from Harrisburg to Easton via Reading and Allentown; with only an occasional break from Sunbury to Philadelphia via Tamaqua and Mauch Chunk. It was the aim of the Highway Department to tie up the already built sections with new mileage; and it succeeded wonderfully.

BOND ISSUE DEFEAT WILL CONTINUE MUD

If Pennsylvania voters defeat the $50,000,000 bond issue November 6, road building will stop for five years, a pamphlet issued by the Associated Highways Organization of Pennsylvania shows. Here are the facts:

Q. What is the amount of the proposed road bond issue for which Pennsylvania will vote in the election of November 6th?

A. $50,000,000.

Q. But the constitutional amendment which will appear on the election ballot mentions $10,000,000. Why?

A. In 1918 the voters by a majority of 265,000 amended the constitution so that $50,000,000 could be borrowed for road construction purposes. This has been spent and another $50,000,000 is needed. So the voters are asked to approve a constitutional amendment to raise the debt limit $50,000,000. That will give the State Highway Department $50,000,000 for road construction.

Q. Why borrow money to build roads?

A. So they can build at the earliest possible time. If we were to wait until the money came into the treasury from ordinary tax collections, we would have to wait 30 years to build them. But if we borrow money we can use the roads while we are paying for them.

Q. If the bond issue fails of passage, what will happen?

A. Beyond construction already authorized, road construction by the state will cease for five years, except for such construction as is made possible by legislative appropriation.

Q. Why five years?

A. The law forbids consideration of a defeated bond issue for five years.

All Lived to Celebrate.

THAT DULL ACHING.

Don't worry and complain about a bad back. Get rid of it! For weak kidneys, lame and achy backs, your neighbors recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbor!

Mrs. D. W. Smith, 37 East Ave., Welsboro, says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with benefit. My kidneys were weak and I had dull, nagging backaches that made me miserable, especially mornings when I was on my feet doing my housework. Dizzy, nervous headaches were frequent and I had no energy. My kidneys acted too freely. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they strengthened my back and kidneys. I was relieved of the headaches and I felt fine."

Prices 60¢, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Smith had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Seventy-Six Thousand New Telephones

That's the number of new Bell Telephones which are being added to the Bell System in Pennsylvania this year, making a total of 850,000.

ADDED is the word, for 76,000 is the net figure. To realize this net gain, we must install a total of 150,000 telephones, not including some fifty thousand moved from one address to another during the year.

And a further gain of 83,500 is expected in 1924.

Installing the telephone instrument, however, is the smallest part of the job.

To carry out our $[illegible] program this year means 52 large building operations, half a million miles of new wire, ten millions of dollars in new switchboards and Central Office equipment.

This is the most stupendous construction program ever undertaken in our telephone history.

It is our response to the demand of the people of Pennsylvania for more and more telephones.

A MILLION PASSENGER AUTOS.

Number Expected to Reach That Figure in State This Year.

According to a Harrisburg dispatch there is every indication that the number of motor vehicle licenses for passenger cars issued this year will exceed 1,000,000 for the first time in the history of the State.

The automobile division of the State highway department on Oct. 22 began issuing licenses above number 975,000, and is now on the last 25,000 licenses to reach the 1,000,000 mark. Register Ben G. Eynon, of the division, in ordering the license plates for this year, estimated 998,000 passenger licenses would be required.

The number issued in less than ten months of this year is already 110,000 in excess of the total for 1922. The division issued 865,000 passenger licenses for 1922.

The total number of all motor vehicles registered with the State has been in excess of 1,000,000 for some time, for almost 75,000 commercial vehicles were licensed in addition to the tags issued for passenger cars.

A STRONG ENDORSEMENT.

Candidate's Neighbors Tell of His Qualifications.

We the undersigned, respectfully submit the following to the voters of Tioga County:

Frank E. Reinwald who is a candidate for the office of County Commissioner of Tioga County, and who received the nomination on the Democratic ticket for that office, has lived in this community all his life. When a boy he was deprived of the privilege of running and playing with the other lads for he was a victim of a fever which left him a cripple all his life. Yet instead of asking assistance from those more fortunate, he applied himself to study and later to business until he has made good in all his life undertakings.

He taught school for several terms, and was then engaged in the mercantile business for several years. During this time he held the office of School Director in Gaines township for 13 years, and township Auditor for 5 years; also he has been your County Auditor for the past 8 years. He has been Secretary of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 981, at Gaines, for 6 years and Secretary of the I. O. O. F. Encampment for 4 years. In the performance of these various Township offices, which he has held, he has always looked carefully to the interests of the tax-payers, and we are confident that if he is elected to the office of County Commissioner he will guard the interests of the taxpayers of the county in the same manner.

Mr. Reinwald is a conscientious, capable and thoro-going man who character is unassailable, and he is deserving of the support of the voters, to the office which he seeks.

Respectfully yours,

J. W. Freleigh, shipper; G. F. Ogden, assessor; P. H. Dewey, lecturer; M. M. Smith, manufacturer; H. Bookmiller, merchant; H. W. Howland, M. D.; J. Roy Cole, farmer; Chas. L. Rexford, farmer; Wm. Rexford, farmer; Harry Lloyd, farmer; E. M. Watrous, pumper; Chas. H. Watrous, operator; D. R. Larrison, farmer; C. E. Davis, road master.

—The Baptist church of Coudersport is to have in the near future the finest church organ in all the Northern Tier. It all comes about through the goodly offices of Rev. Charles H. Dodd, a former pastor, now located at Germantown. In New York City, a wealthy Baptist congregation is building a beautiful new church and will buy a new organ. Rev. Dodd arranged for his former charge to have the organ in the old church. It will cost from $4,000 to $5,000 to take the organ down, ship it and reerect it in Coudersport.

—When a man is the architect of his own fortune he never figures on any exits.

CORPORATIONS WILL PAY.

Three-Quarters of State's Revenue Comes From Big Business Interests.

The Hon. John S. Fisher, of Indiana, former Banking Commissioner of Pennsylvania, and for years president of the Associated Highways Organization of Pennsylvania, this week issued a statement showing that taxpayers in Pennsylvania townships will actually save money if the voters November 6 approve the $50,000,000 bond issue for road purposes.

"With this money," said Senator Fisher, "the State Highway Department will build over 1300 miles of road. Were this mileage not built by the department, the improvement, if it came about, would necessarily have to be at the cost of the taxpayers in the various townships.

"Every piece of construction undertaken by the State Highway Department is a relief to the individual taxpayers because the cost of this construction comes, for the most part, from the taxes paid into the State Treasury by corporations.

"It is impossible for this bond issue to increase the taxes of farmers or other owners of real estate. There is no state tax on real estate.

"Since 1919, the commonwealth has issued $50,000,000 in bonds, but no person's tax was increased as a result; nor will any person's tax grow larger as a result of the new bond issue."

"Where do the state taxes come from?" Senator Fisher was asked.

"Pennsylvania corporations pay three-quarters of them," was Senator Fisher's reply. "They pay a tax on capital stock, their net profits, corporation loans, corporation gross receipts, corporation gross premiums, corporation penalties, corporation interest, a bonus on charters.

"In addition we have a tax on bankers' and brokers' gross receipts, bank stock, borough loans, building and loan stock, foreign insurance premiums, notary public commissions, notary public gross receipts, unregistered foreign insurance premiums, stock transfer stamps.

"The miscellaneous income includes receipts for the care of insane, the collection of surety on bonds, currending machines, escheats, examinations of moving picture films, fees of public officers, and a dozen other miscellaneous items.

"The licenses collected every year total several million dollars. The licenses based on the per cent of revenue include those of chiropodists, cold storage plants, egg openers, employment agents, medical licenses, oleomargarine licenses and others of that kind.

"But as I say, the major portion of the fund from which payment of appropriations is made comes from the corporations of Pennsylvania; and if the $50,000,000 bond issue is passed, the corporations will bear the greater part of the cost."

Steinmetz, the hunchbacked little German who snatched lightning from the skies and made thunderbolts do his bidding, had only recently returned from a lecture tour which had taken him to all parts of the United States. His great brain was alert to the end, but the body could no longer stand the strain which many years of driving mental force had placed upon it.
